

SAYING "ICH DIEN" THEY BEGIN LIFE.

TWENTY-FIVE GRADUATES RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

Practical Themes Predominate in the Commencement Exercises—Many Questions That Have a Bearing Upon the Life of To-Day Intelligently Discussed By Members of '94.

People used to think there couldn't be a commencement day without a class motto in Latin.

It remained for '94 to prove this a fallacy.

A lot of other traditions were exploded today.

No graduation programme used to be complete without a salutatory and a valedictory; an essay on "The Night Brings Out the Stars" and an oration on "Over the Alps Lies Italy."

None of these was heard today. There was a refreshing lack of the stereotyped and conventional. More than that, and a source of just pride to Superintendent Mayne was the fact that Janesville schools never before turned out as large a class as graduated this afternoon.

Twenty-five sat on the stage in Myers Grand and joined the audience in admiring the drappings of yellow and white that active juniors arranged this morning. Over the heads of the class hung its motto, the homely, honest, inspiring German phrase: "Ich Dien."

The commencement exercises were given during the afternoon to a crowded house. The aisles and lobbies as well as every seat were occupied. After the opening number by the Arion Lady Quartette, Rev. E. H. Pence offered fervent prayer for the graduates and for the schools.

Themes of the Essayists.

"Gertrude of Denmark" was the title of the first number by the graduates. This was by Gertrude Stoddard. It showed careful, painstaking study of Shakespeare's greatest work, Hamlet and suggested congratulations that such a topic as this should be chosen for a commencement thesis. The character of the queen was made very interesting from a popular standpoint and as an analysis of character the literary critics could not but be pleased. Queen Gertrude was held to be not wholly good or entirely bad. She was the character which Shakespeare designed should represent the weakness of woman's nature.

"School House Ventilation," a topic of practical value, was admirably handled by Harriet McCulloch. She spoke very earnestly upon the theme and urged that the supplying of a proper amount of fresh air to pupils who spend so much time in the school room is only an act of humanity and common sense and not a luxury.

Harry S. Haggart took for his subject "Nikola Tesla," the great electrician. After recounting some of the wonderful discoveries made by Tesla in the domain of electricity, he compared the motives of this man with those of Edison. Tesla has worked hard in order that he might benefit humanity. He cares not for riches or for fame. So absorbed is he with his discoveries that he counts his time wasted in making displays of them. Edison, on the other hand, seems to be looking for some practical application of the discoveries made with a view to making the product merchantable. The speaker held that the name of Tesla should be a household word, and that he should be known as one of the world's greatest benefactors.

"Man's Best Friend" was a title giving broad scope, but the interpretation chosen by Mary L. Hadden bestowed the honor and the title on the horse. Very beautifully she wove into a pleasing whole her laudation of the racer, the draft horse and the family pet. Literature and history lent their aid in beautifying her theme.

Hard Times An Inspiration.

Harry W. McNamara's topic was "Kites Fly Against the Wind." Graduating classes for a number of years, he suggested, had looked out upon a world of prosperity. Invitations to laboring men and to professional men could be heard from all sides. The class of '94 looked out upon a very different picture, closed factories, over filled professions. The prospect was certainly gloomy but a little more determination, a little more energy would result in even greater success in the end than in the beginning everything were favorable for success.

"Questionable Philanthropy" was given intelligent treatment by Minnie Iola Davey. Beggars, tramps and hand organ minstrels should be given no encouragement. The giving of alms to such frauds took away just so much from the needy poor and the industrious. Few individuals had time or tact to examine into the merits of each mendicant. Far better was it that charity be thoroughly organized and a bureau formed that should examine into each case and apply the needed remedy either of work or of alms. Not less charity but more effective charity was her plea.

Industrial topics received much attention from the class. Clarence W. Rowe's oration "Agriculture in the Schools" being a plea for more of the utilitarian sentiment in education. The schools tended too much toward the professions, he urged, giving young men an impulse toward branches already overcrowded while the noblest occupation of all was neglected.

Two centuries of wrong were reviewed by Jessie Belle Davey in her thesis, "Lo, the Poor Indian." She told of the encroachment of the white man, told of his constant violations of faith and urged that the men of the nation give attention to this great wrong. Citizenship was suggested as a possible solution of the Indian problem.

One of the most stirring addresses of the afternoon was John F. Day's, "Who Are the Victors?" The thought he expressed was that the one who receives plaudits on history's page may not be entitled to the highest place. That honor may really belong to the one who has discharged his duty faithfully in a more humble walk.

Instead of the valedictory there was a poem, "The Ocean of Life," by Cora L. Anderson. Miss Anderson clothed her thoughts in graceful phrase, her smiles being well chosen.

Foyer Filled With Flowers

Warm applause followed each number and floral gifts told of the regard of friends. The flowers nearly filled the foyer, before the exercises began.

The Arion Lady Quartette furnished four very appropriate numbers on the programme. Their singing was a revelation of power and sweetness. This little taste should fill the opera house this evening. It is safe to say that the Arions are the best lady quartette before the public to-day. Janesville's music-lovers who are capable of judging, say that their technique is exceedingly fine.

Those pupils who appeared on the programme on Tuesday evening at the class day exercises, were on the platform to-day, but did not take part in the exercises. The full class as it filed past Superintendent Mayne to receive diplomas was made up as follows:

Nellie McKean, Eva Knoff, Harriet McCulloch, Clara Bell Paul, Louise Shearer, Gertrude E. Stod-Birdie Stoller, May L. Valentine, Volney D. Atwood, John F. Day, Harry S. Haggart, H. W. McNamara, Clarence W. Rowe, Harry E. Shawman, Frank W. Vankirk, Cora L. Anderson, Jennie M. Baker, Nora Lillian Bull, Helen E. Clark, Jessie Belle Davey, Minnie Iola Davey, Mary L. Hadden, Winifred E. Jerome, Nettie May Kent, Ada R. Fenton, Senior Party a Success.

One hundred couples and over enjoyed the high school party last night. Eleven of Johnny Smith's men sat behind a bank of white and yellow roses and discoursed music too charming to be resisted were the night far warmer. Yellow and white the decorations on every side; yellow and white were the flowers the graduates wore. In the flowers the dainty dresses and the bright faces, were the elements of a picture not easily forgotten. Dancing continued until 1 o'clock, Frank Parker serving cream and lemonade in the gallery after 10:30.

Tonight comes the high school concert at Myers Grand. The coming of the Arion quartette has been eagerly awaited and a large audience is probable.

The Alumni association's reception will end commencement week. It will be given in Columbia hall, there being talks by several of the old graduates. The business meeting of the association will be held in the high school building tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

A Dress That Would Never Be Worn.

"Humph!" said Miss Hawkins as she glanced over her fashion paper, "here's a dress I'd like to wear but never be worn." "Which is that?" queried Miss Jarley. "This," said Miss Hawkins, and when Miss Jarley looked she saw that it was a design for a costume for an "elderly unmarried woman." She did not take Miss Hawkins' bet.—Harper's Bazar.

FAMOUS COLT TO BE HERE NEXT WEEK.

"MONBARS" WITH A THREE-YEAR OLD RECORD OF 2:11 3/4.

The Noted Animal Is in M. E. McHenry's Stable Along With a Lot of Other Good Ones—H. J. Killilea Has a Fast One Entered—Notes For the Horsemen.

About as famous a horse as anyone sits behind will pace in Janesville next week. Monbars, a black horse by Eagle Bird with a three year record of 2:11 3/4 is the animal and M. E. McHenry is the driver. The fast animal will go in the five year classes this year and is entered in the 2:40 pacing class. It is a pretty cold day when Mr. McHenry doesn't start out with a few surprises in his stable. Last year it was May Marshall who paced in Janesville in the slowest class and later surprised the racing world and "annihilated space" to the tune of 2:08 1/2. The mare wintered remarkably well, is moving finely and some enthusiastic admirers expect to see her cover the mile in about two minutes. If any driver can make her do it McHenry is the man. May Marshall's training has been kept up with a great deal of regularity. During the winter she was jogged to a light cart or sleigh over the country roads or city streets, and as soon as spring came she was put on the cinder track.

Many Other Fast Ones His

Gene Wilton, a two-year-old by Wilton is in the colt race for that age here and is entered in $25,000 worth of stakes throughout the circuit. Mr. McHenry also has Greenleaf, 2:10 1/2; Phoebe Wilkes, 2:11; Moquette, 2:10; Baronet, 2:10 1/2; Lobasco, 2:15 1/2; Kate V., 2:24 1/2; Roy Barron, 2:24 1/2; Minnie Wilkes, 2:20 1/2. Mr. McHenry goes from here through the circuit.

H. J. Killilea, the Milwaukee lawyer enters Harry Brown in the 2:20 purse. This horse is one of his two late purchases both steeds being crack pacers. Harry Brown was formerly owned by George Howard and has a record of 2:16 and the other is J. H. L. with a time of 2:08 1/2. The latter expert judges predict will eventually become the fastest pacer in the country.

Not Many Old Ones Here.

Not many horses, except local flyers, that are entered for next week's meeting have gone in Janesville before. Aurora Prince, b. s., by Florida, who is now entered in the free-for-all trotting class with the '27 horses last June but got but sixth place in the race, the best time being 2:31.

Chicago Belle, s. m., by Onward, is now in the 2:27 class, but last year she was outside the money class, the best time being 2:25 1/2.

George W. Spear's Ben Gaines, by Allie Gaines, is in the '32 class this year the same as last. Spear drove him in the hottest race that was seen last year, the money finally falling to American Jay. Woodlark, by Woodcroft owned by D. Mihills, of Evansville was also in the race and got fourth money; Ben Gaines was fifth and both are in the same class this year. American Jay had to go in 2 1/2 that day.

Dave R. the fast white pacer owned by J. T. Hutson of Stoughton is in the '22 class this year. He was in the '24 class here last September and got fourth money the best time being 2:21.

Neatness ch m by Neatwood in the '40 pacing class. T. J. Dunbar drove her against Alice Director last September in the '30 class for pacers. Alice won easily in straight heats, the best time being 2:24.

Alta a black mare from Minneapolis is in the free-for-all trotting class next week. Her last appearance here was last September when she went in the '20 trotting class and was driven after finishing third in the first heat in 2:19 1/2.

Winner at Freeport.

M. E. McHenry drove Sister Ethel to victory in the '40 class, trotting, at Freeport yesterday. He has the same horse in the '50 and '37 classes here. May Ross was in fourth place, and Expectation was distanced. Both of these horses are also entered here.

Kansas Jack, who is entered in the 2:30 pacing class here won the '15 pacing event at Freeport, the best time being 2:20.

Lady Wilkes, a horse that was not entered here, won the Freeport 2:30 purse yesterday. Eldridge, entered in the '27 class here, got third money, while Mark W. entered in the '33 class here, won in the fifth place. The best time was 2:42.

The free-for-all purse fell to Phoebe Wilkes, another horse that Janesville people will not see. Kate F. entered in the same class here, got second money by winning the second heat in 2:16 1/2. Lissa and Aurora Prince, both of whom will be in the Janesville free-for-all, got third and fourth money respectively. Kate F.'s heat in 2:16 1/2, was the fastest in the race.

Ethel A, a green pacer not yet three years old, is entered with the pacers for that age here, and at Freeport yesterday she astonished everyone by winning the '35 purse for sidewheelers, making a mile in 2:19. Shamrock, a horse that will not pace here, got second money, Logan T, third, Hazel Egbert fourth; while Rowdy Joe got the flag. Hazel Egbert is not entered here, but Logan T and Rowdy Joe are both named in the '40 pacing class.

MANY CHILDREN AT A PICNIC.

St. Paul's Lutheran School Has Its Annual Outing Up the River.

A hundred childish voices rang out through the trees at Crystal Springs today.

An organ pealed its accompaniment.

Fifty children of older growth added their voices to the stirring chorus. Thus melodiously the annual picnic of St. Paul's parochial school was begun.

There was a parade of the children from the school to the steamboat dock at 9 o'clock, Professor John C. Zinck acting as marshal. Each child carried a flag, the little girls were adorned with red, white and blue sashes and a drum corps led the procession. The day on the grounds was given up to games and at 3 o'clock there were recitations in German and English. Every child received a prize and there were wheelbarrow races, pole climbing, bag race, jumping and egg carrying.

ALLIGATOR CAUGHT BY AN ANGLER

James Dugan Lands a Scaly Monster Back of the Fire Station.

James Dugan's two eyes bulged out when he pulled his fish line from the river and saw an alligator about two feet long dangling on the hook. He yelled to his companions and never noticed F. F. Pierson suffering from convulsions just around the corner. Dugan and the other men at No. 2 fire station sometimes break the monotony by fishing in the rear of the station and they were indulging in this peaceful sport when Dugan made his haul. Pierson's pet alligator died a few days ago, and when Dugan left his line for a moment this morning, Pierson pulled up the hook and attached the alligator retreating to a convenient place for observation. The scheme was a success and the boys had an hours fun over the catch, before they could convince Dugan that a practical joke had been played.

GRADUATION OF BLIND CHILDREN.

Commencement Exercises at the State School Next Monday.

Dr. J. O. Cleary, of the state board of control will deliver the address to graduates at the school for the blind next Monday evening.

The musical programme will be especially fine. Besides the selections by the orchestra at the school under the able direction of Mrs. M. D. Jones, there will be some excellent chorus work, solos, etc. There will be two graduates this year. The exercises will commence at 7:30 and the public will be welcome.

ROCK GETS $20,244

FROM THE MILL TAX

THE SHARE THIS COUNTY PAID WAS $25,498.

Amount Turned in From the County Treasury Was About $5,000 More than Came back—Distribution is Made on the Basis of $1.357 a Head.

County Treasurer Burdick has received for the one mill state school tax, and in a day or two will receive from the state treasurer the sum of $20,249.14 as the amount apportioned to Rock county. This sum is reapportioned to the several towns, villages and cities according to school census. The city of Janesville receives $6,088.86. This sum would appear as a large donation from the state but for the fact that Rock county paid in considerably more than is received. Rock county's apportionment of the one mill school tax in 1893, which raised the above sum, was $25,498, being over five thousand dollars in excess of the amount returned. Janesville paid over one thousand dollars more than received.

The money is raised by tax, on a basis of one mill on the dollar, and is apportioned for capita according to school census, being $1.357 per capita on 638,311 children. The amount apportioned is $866,187.74.

The figures show that the growth of the school fund income has rather more kept pace with the growth in school population in the past four years. In June, 1890, the amount appropriated was $773,479.15 on a basis of 576,363 children, which was at the rate of $1.342 per capita. In 1889 it was $770,913.52 on a basis of 567,683 children, a per capita of $1.359, thus showing a falling off the rate in 1890.

BAD BLAZE QUICKLY CHECKED.

Frame Building Full of Dry Lumber Furnish Good Fuel.

Janesville's fire department did a clever piece of work last night in extinguishing what looked like the beginning of a big blaze in George K. Colling's building, 106 North Main street, and a boarding house owned by J. P. Wright and occupied by Mrs. Nancy Martin, 3 Prospect avenue. A few minutes after 9 o'clock the flames burst out of the roof of the rear part of the Colling building, and an alarm was turned in from box 25. The building was dry, filled with dry material, and the flames quickly spread to the boarding house. Quick and telling movements of the fire department soon extinguished the flames. Chemical extinguishers were used exclusively on the Wright building, and the fire was thus stopped in this building without flooding with water.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The rear part of the building was used as a carpenter shop, at the rear of which was a shed containing a box stall for one horse. This was filled with dry waste lumber. The shop contained considerable machinery. The front part of the building is occupied by John M. O'Neil as a residence.

The bursting out of the flames caused many people to hurry to the scene. The fire was in a dangerous place, in the center of a cluster of frame buildings, threatening thousands of dollars damage. It was extinguished with but a small pecuniary loss, one hundred and fifty dollars being considered sufficient to replace everything. The property was uninsured.

Born, Not Made

Weak by imprudence, are many stomachs. Funny people have invariably weak digestion. The robust as a rule eat heartily and assimilate their food. A naturally weak stomach, or one that has become, although not so originally, derives needful aid from this thorough stomachic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The restoration of vigor to the delicate is the prompt effect of a resource to this professionally sanctioned and universally esteemed promoter of health. Nervousness—a symptom of chronic indigestion—is overcome by it. So are liver complaint and constipation. Incontinent rheumatism and kidney trouble it defeats thoroughly, and it constitutes an efficient defense against malaria. But in order that the full benefit derivable from its use should be available of it should not be used in a haphazard way, but continually. The same suggestion holds good of all standard remedies.

A New Haven Scheme.

A New Haven street railway company has hit upon a new plan to prevent riders handing their transfer checks to friends. A set of miniature heads is now printed on each check. The first is of a smooth-faced man, the second the head and face of a mustached man, the third wears side-whiskers, and the fourth has a full beard. Of feminine heads there are only two classifications—one in a bonnet, and one without—the presumption being that the fair sex would not be apt to resort to any fare dodging.

The Bang Barometer.

Yet another occupation has been found for women—that of acting as barometers. Weather Prophet Dunn is quoted as saying that "one of the ways of telling whether the temperature was rising was to watch a girl's front hair. When it began to lose its curl and grow straight, it would be a sure sign of a change of temperature."

That Noisy Music.

It was in the boiler factory.
"Who," asked one of the workmen, "is that pretty girl who comes here so often?"
"She's a musician."
"What does she come here for?"

THE MONTH OF BRIDES.

June the Time of Wedding Bells, Breezes, Sunshine and Fresh Foliage.

June, the month of weddings, is an ideal bridal month, a time of roses and sunshine and fresh foliage not yet marred by the droughts and canker worms of the heat of summer. There are always plenty of flowers to decorate the church or the house where the marriage is to occur, there is a reasonable certainty of pleasant weather on the occasion, and the general joyousness of the season aids in dissipating

WEDDING GOWN.

the funeral gloom which almost always hangs about the immediate neighborhood of the individuals principally concerned in spite of the traditional merriment of marriage bells. The contracting pair have usually a most marvelous power of diffusing among their friends great depression of spirits and a sense of the worthlessness of life under any circumstances, so it is fortunate that the ceremony is a short one and the strain is over before it becomes too harrowing. A certain Presbyterian clergyman has two forms of service. One he employs for the rank and file of weddings, while the other he reserves for his particular friends, and as he has many of the latter it is not allowed to fall into long disuse.

Since real orange flowers are so easily obtained, it seems unaccountable that the sentless and soulless Parisian products are ever worn, but these are chosen by the majority of brides and come neatly made up into coronets, corsage bouquets and garlands for the skirt.

The fashion of making wedding gowns with an open V shaped neck and elbow sleeves seems to be gradually gaining ground, although there has been hitherto a prejudice against it, a high neck and long sleeves being justly considered simpler and more appropriate to the occasion.
The trailing skirt is, of course, an invariable feature.

An illustration is given of an unusually pretty design for a bridal gown. A trained skirt of accordion plaited white satin is worn under a second skirt of white moire draped over the hips and falling in a long, hollow plait on either side of the train. It is bordered with guipure vandykes. The accordion plaited satin bodice has a wide moire belt closing behind under a large bow. The accordion plaited sleeves have guipure epaulets and cuffs.

Never Turn Your Back on Your Lamb's
Wool Wrapper Even In Summer.

To recommend lamb's wool for hot weather wear may at first seem like nonsense. It certainly is not a fabric suited for general summer use. But nevertheless the same lamb's wool wrapper that was so comfortable a garment in winter will be found a convenience in the warm months also and ought never to be laid away with the other flannel clothes that are packed up in camphor in the spring.
For the siesta after a bath or any sort of

CREAM FLANNEL WRAPPER.

violent exercise it is far better than a dressing gown of cotton or silk material. The body is then in a relaxed condition, which renders it peculiarly susceptible to even a slight chill, and the open windows that allow the entrance of delightfully cool breezes will also admit rheumatism and neuralgia, against which wool is the surest armor.

A woman whose circulation is equable and whose movements are constitutionally slow runs no danger of becoming overheated and may safely wear linen and muslin at all times, as she is not open to atmospheric influences, but her more sensitive sister, whose skin flushes and pales with slight cause, who exercises actively and feels the consequent reaction and whose nerves are easily affected, must guard against sudden changes of temperature if she wishes to keep thoroughly well, and wool is the best protection she can have. If pure wool underwear is too irritating, a mixture of silk and wool may be worn, which is smoother and almost as good a nonconductor of heat.
Plain silk is better than cotton, and linen is the worst material that can be worn next the skin, as it is of a cold and clammy nature, which carries away the natural warmth of the body and affords no stimulant in return. Flannel underwear, no matter how thin, should therefore be kept at hand during the summer, and a flannel dressing gown as well, to be worn at discretion.

A sketch is given of a pretty wrapper made of cream flannel. The cuffs are bordered with a bias fold of yellow velvet, and a wide collar of the same material covers the shoulders. The back of the gown is fitted, but the front is gathered and confined at the waist by a girdle of heavy cord. Velvetene may be employed instead of velvet.

HARPER'S HISTORY OF THE WAR

Harper's Pictorial History is universally recognized as the best history of the war yet published. This superb work has never been sold for less than $16 to $30. It has been sold only by subscription and but a very few men have been able to buy it.

The pages are the same size as Harper's Weekly and the work contains all the illustrations appearing in that great paper during the war. The work was edited by Richard Grant White and Henry M. Alden and is authentic, complete and reliable.

We have made arrangements whereby we can furnish Gazette subscribers with this splendid history of twenty-six parts at ten cents a part. These twenty-six parts will contain over one thousand war pictures and will make two handsome volumes when bound.

Many official documents of priceless historic value are quoted in full in the copious foot notes, such for instance as Lincoln's inauguration speeches, articles of federation of the early states, constitution of the United States, ordinance of secession, and many important papers, speeches, etc. The war story is consecutive and very fascinating. The introductory chapters, leading up to the struggle, and the chapter on the reconstruction period, are by some of the first writers of the age.

FRAUDS IN WILLS.

The Daring Trick of a Disinherited Elder Son.

"One of the most daring tricks I ever came across," said a New York attorney, "was the case of a man who deliberately impersonated a lawyer's clerk and persuaded a very sick man to sign a will without reading it, and which disposed of his property in direct opposition to his wishes. It was a case of a family dispute and the old gentleman, who was quite wealthy, had decided to disinherit his eldest son and leave the property to a younger one. Being warned by his doctor that he had only a day or two more to live, he sent instructions to his attorney to draft his will and send it down promptly for signature. While the lawyer was preparing the document a representative of the eldest son arrived with a paper, which he said was the will prepared by the sick man's attorney. The will was signed without hesitation and duly witnessed, and when two hours later the lawyer's clerk arrived with the genuine will he was not allowed to enter the house, being warned off the premises by the housekeeper. On his return to the office his employer saw at once that a fraud had been committed, and he hastened to the house to have it set right. In the meantime, however, the sick man had become unconscious, and died without being able to execute a will after his own wishes. The bogus will was upset, but the fraud could never be sufficiently proved to convict the man suspected of concocting it, and he inherited quite a large sum of the money as next of kin."

THE OYSTER GOT EVEN.

He Embraced the Duck's Bill and the Bird Died.

The meek and lowly oyster can sometimes become a revengeful as well as a dangerous antagonist, as an unwary duck found to his cost a day or so ago on the eastern shore of the Chesapeake. This careless duck, belonging to the tribe known as "fishermen," was swimming about in search of food off the shores near Claiborne when he espied an oyster—a nice, fat, juicy oyster he was—with shell widely parted, feeding, doubtless, on the simple and rather intangible diet upon which an oyster is supposed to feed.

The duck, true to his greedy instincts, dived for that supposed juicy morsel, and was about to swallow him whole, without salt or pepper even, when the angry passions of the oyster arose, and snapping his shells together, caught the unsuspecting duck's bill in a vise-like embrace. The duck rose to the surface, shook his head, mumbled apologies through his tight shut mouth, but the bivalve's heart was hardened, and he held on. Soon the constant load pulling down his head and growing weightier and weightier began to tire the duck, and his neck arched lower and lower until finally it sank into the water and he was drowned.

A deckhand on the steamboat Tangier saw the duck floating with his head submerged and picked him up. The oyster was still clinging to his victim with a relentless, deadly grasp, and the tragedy that must have been enacted as described was revealed. But the duck and the slayer were brought to Baltimore on the Tangier and proved quite a curiosity.

GILDERS IN AMERICA.

Circumstances in the Reign of George IV That Sent Master Workmen Here.

It is a tradition among the gilders of New York that they owe their peculiar skill to the redecoration of Windsor castle at the command of George IV. Every available gilder of London was busied for a long time in gilding the palace, and when the work was done many of them found that their places in the trade had been taken by apprentices. Unable to find work at home, many came to America, and some established themselves in New York. These men taught their art to Americans, and the gilders of this country are now among the best in the world. The trade languished for a time in the face of cheap processes and cheap materials, but the taste for first-rate work, whether it be picture frames, or furniture or walls, has never really gone out.

The trade has been split up into subtrades, and just now the stencil fresco painters are quarreling with the gilders over the question as to which class of artisans shall do the gilding of interior decorations. The gilders, who regard their trade as an art, look upon that of the stencil frescoers as merely mechanical.

Exit the Cradle.

The cradle is fast becoming a curio, especially in its earlier hooded form. The modern American baby is not cradled and not carried, but taught to content itself with a mattress like anything else, so that the phrase "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world" refers to a custom almost obsolete.

ENJOIN THE MAYOR'S SIGNING OF BONDS

HIGH SCHOOL PROJECT IN THE COURTS.

Judge Bennett to be Asked to Forbid the Issue of the $55,000 Specified in the Ordinance—Brief Bits of Chat Culled on a Hot Day—Templars Honored in Milwaukee.

JUDGE BENNETT will be asked to enjoin Mayor Thoroughgood from issuing high school bonds. Legal action against the issue was determined upon last night at a meeting of several property owners. The names of those who will join in the proceeding have not been made public. "I had been more or less active in the matter," said B. B. Eldredge this morning, "and I told the gentlemen that they could use my name if they liked." "Then it is certain that injunction proceedings will be begun?" "Under certain circumstances an effort will be made to enjoin the mayor, but the plans are not matured. A positive statement will be made in a few days," was Mr. Eldredge's response. Members of the school board have been notified, however, that the decision has been definitely reached.

This is a big country when frosts and hot winds, floods and drouth, poverty and plenty, gold and script, locusts and Coxeyites, good shoes and humbugs all threaten us at the same time, it stands us in need of discrimination carefully in making our choice. He has been acting in the same capacity here, securing the Orange County prize of $100 for making the best collections and obtaining the largest number of policies." The "Prudential" was introduced and carried on here by Mr. Lewis F. Grant from the Milwaukee district some ten months since. The appreciation of this company's policies in Janesville has been such that a new Wisconsin district has been created with this city as a center. Offices are now being opened at 15 West Milwaukee street, opposite the post office, where all information relative to this Old Line company's policies can be obtained. Dr. Hugh Menzies has been appointed local medical examiner. A competent staff of agents will shortly be in the field and policy holders will receive calls as usual from Agent Lewis F. Grant.

BLOOD AND BRAINS ALL OVER HIS BED

HOWARD MOSHER'S DEATH A GRAVE MYSTERY.

Carpenter Died of a Bullet Wound at 5 O'clock—First Stories Were That He Committed Suicide—Police Now Have a Different Theory—Numerous Strange Circumstances.

Steaming in a pool of clotted blood lay the body of Howard C. Mosher this morning when the coroner's jury commenced their investigation of the mystery.

Mosher was dead. A big bullet hole just back of the right temple and above the ear revealed the cause of death.

Mosher's hands were folded on his left breast above his heart, and at his left elbow lay a 38-calibre Smith & Wesson revolver, two chambers being empty. One had been recently discharged. The butt of the weapon lay toward the foot of the bed—a circumstance that is believed to be significant.

The bed was a shocking sight—being perfectly saturated with blood. Mrs. Mosher thus explained the tragic affair: "I was awakened at half past 3 o'clock this morning by the report of a gun. I immediately got up and passed to the front of the bed, and found the revolver by the side of my husband. I then called the hired man, John Caldwell, who was asleep down stairs. Mr. Mole was called and some other neighbors, and then Sheriff Bear was called. Mr. Mosher died at 5:20 without ever moving or saying a word. He was in good spirits and went to bed about 10 o'clock. I went to bed first."

"I think there is a mystery about this affair," said Sheriff Bear when Dr. Loomis called his attention to the condition of the bed in which the dead man lay. The sheriff made a searching investigation. The bed did not have the appearance of being occupied by two persons. It had not been disturbed on the right side, supposed to have been occupied by Mrs. Mosher. The pillow presented no sign of indentation.

"I don't believe this bed contained two persons last night," said the sheriff.

Caldwell Says He Didn't Hear. The bed down stairs occupied by Caldwell was all disturbed, and had the appearance of being well occupied. A little daughter occupied a small cot on the floor in the chamber where her father was shot. "I did not hear the gun," said Mr. Caldwell, to a Gazette reporter. "The first I knew of the shooting was when Mrs. Mosher called me."

The jury summoned by Sheriff Bear on papers issued by Justice Prichard, were Alexander Walker, C. T. Wilcox, William Hadden, E. D. Miller, E. C. Burdick, C. N. Vankirk. After investigating the surroundings the inquest was adjourned until 9 o'clock Friday morning, to give Dr. Henry Palmer and E. E. Loomis opportunity to examine the body.

Mosher is a carpenter by trade, although he has worked as a laborer and teamster. For a long time he was in the employ of John Thoroughgood & Co. teaming. Lately he has been doing carpenter work. Yesterday he commenced building a house near the Mole culvert for George Warner, motorman on the open car. He had the frame work raised last night.

Mosher is thirty years of age, and has a wife and one daughter.

John Caldwell, who is an itinerant carpenter, was at work with Mosher, and boarded with the family, occupying a room down stairs, while Mosher and his family occupied a room upstairs.

Did He Kill Himself? From the first discovery of the dead man by people outside the household, suspicion was aroused. They doubted the statement of Mrs. Mosher that she occupied the bed with her husband, especially when they noticed that that portion of the bed which she must have occupied was not disturbed, the pillow not being mused in the least.

The arms of the dead man were folded naturally upon his breast as if in sleep and the revolver lay with the butt toward the foot of the bed, at his left side, while the wound was on the right side of the face.

The bed down stairs, occupied by the carpenter, Caldwell, appeared as if two or more persons might have occupied it, although it was claimed that Caldwell was the only occupant. Mrs. Mosher's night clothes were not stained by a particle of the blood that sprouted from the wound in the head of her husband, which could hardly have been the case had she occupied the bed with her husband at the time she claims. These circumstances had great weight with Sheriff Bear, and he is using every endeavor to straighten the stories, and if possible obtain the real cause of Mosher's death. Whispers were frequently heard that Mosher was jealous of Caldwell. Additional light is expected at the inquest to-morrow.

BOSS SHOT AT BAD BOYS. Man Who Was Hit With Eggs Took the Law in His Hands.

Fred Boss of Hanover is again in trouble. A covey of youngsters have been committing depredations about his premises in Hanover.

First the boys invaded his grounds and threw stones at his house. Boss claims to have lost considerable property and at one time endeavored to arrest the boys on charge of burglary. Failing in this, he appears to have taken the execution of justice according to his idea into his own hands, and the next time the boys visited his place he fired a gun at them.

The boys retreated to an old barn, and after entering they fastened the door. Boss laid siege and finally fired upon the boys through the door. The ball, it is claimed, passed through the clothing of one of the boys. Evacuating the barn the boys then stormed the dwelling with stale eggs, for which they were arrested and Tuesday in the municipal court, the four Haight boys were convicted.

Now the Hights propose to have a little fun with Boss on the other side. This morning a warrant was secured from a justice in Hanover, and Boss was arrested on charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm. The examination will take place in Hanover on Saturday, and if Boss is held, the trial will be in the municipal court in this city.

RELIEF CORPS LADIES AT TEA. Janesville Delegation Attend the Beloit Entertainment Today.

Twelve Janesville ladies went to Beloit this noon to attend a tea given by L. H. D. Crane Woman's Relief Corps. They were all members of the local corps and were Mesdames J. H. Parker, John Collins, Louis Trambie, G. A. Warren, John Barry, C. J. Blakeley, Gibson, Henry Jarvis, Orville Church, S. L. James, Gibeau, and Miss Elia Willis. They will return at 7:45 this evening.

DAILY RECORD OF DEATH. Funeral of John Broderick.

John Leashey, Edward Murphy, Richard Barry, Anthony Powers, William Canary and William Blake were the pall bearers at the funeral of John Broderick this morning. The services at St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock, conducted by Dean E. M. McGidney, were largely attended, and a large number of people formed the procession which escorted the funeral party to Mount Olivet, the place of interment.

Dr. W. V. Stevens. Janesville Masors will have charge of the funeral of Dr. W. V. Stevens, whose remains have been sent from Trinidad, Colorado, to this city. Worshipful Master J. L. Croft of Western Star lodge, No. 14, received a letter from the Trinidad lodge requesting a Masonic burial for Dr. Stevens and stating that he was a son of Palmer H. Stevens, who died here in 1868. Further notice of the funeral will be given.

Funeral of Martin Wensloff. The remains of Martin Wensloff were buried in Oak Hill yesterday afternoon. Funeral services were held at the home of Fred Gatzig in the town of Rock at 1 o'clock, and at St. Paul's Lutheran church at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. C. J. Koerner officiating. The pall bearers were John Abendroth, August Boggs, William Baggs, August Lutz, William Hell, August Benwitz.

Mrs. James Sykes. Mrs. James Sykes, of Spring Valley, died at her home last evening. She leaves a husband and five children.

BROWN SUGAR.

It Is Being Rapidly Supplanted by the White Crystals.

Many roots are tolerably rich in sugar—everybody must have noticed its presence in carrots, from which, indeed, it has even at times been commercially extracted. But sugar is still more abundant in the beet, whose juice contains about fifteen per cent of crystallizable sucrose. As an industry, the production of beet-sugar has a curious history. It originated in France under Napoleon I., when the English blockade prevented communication with Martinique and Haiti. It grew rapidly after the emancipation of the slaves in the British dominions; and being fostered by governments on the continent, it is now beginning to drive the poor antiquated and superannuated cane entirely out of the market. Of recent years, by far the larger part of the sugar employed in England is of French origin, or "made in Germany."

That, says the Cornhill Magazine, is one of the reasons why brown sugar has gone out and white sugar come so largely into fashion. The sweet and pleasant muscovados, produced by simple boiling of the crude cane juice, could be employed for sweetening coffee, for the domestic rice pudding, for the use of infants, and for a great many other simple household purposes. The half-refined moist sugar, commonly known as Demerara, still holds its own for these daily purposes. But raw beet-root sugar displays its origin by an unpleasant earthy flavor; it smacks of the soil too much, and carries with it reminiscences of a somewhat turnip character. On this account brown sugar has gone out, especially in those coarse and treacherous forms which delighted the palate of our unsophisticated childhood.

Refining is at present almost universal, and the flavorless, insipid, loose-grained beet-root sugar, sawn into oblong bricks, has invaded our breakfast tables. The light, moist sugars now so much employed for cooking purposes are refined sugar of insufficient purity to be crystallized into loaves. Cube sugar, on the other hand, which is so fashionable that it can afford to present the country with new national galleries of British art, is made up from the most crystallizable syrup, which runs away earliest from the charcoal cisterns of the refineries; but it is especially treated in peculiar molds, from which the remaining molasses is driven off with rude violence by centrifugal machines. The result is pure grains of transparent crystal.

Changed Her Order.

It was the holy calm of midnight. The clock was even then striking the hour. He toyed nervously with the menu card.

"Darling," he faltered, "I fear you are deceived in me."

A startled look came into her great eyes.

"George Henry—baron," she gasped.

He was pale but resolute.

"Yes," he proceeded with a visible effort, "while my patrimonial estate is large it is heavily encumbered."

For some minutes both were silent. She was the first to speak.

"There is but—"

Her lips were firmly pressed together.

"—one thing for me to do. I will—"

She heeded not his deprecatory gesture.

"—change my order from strawberries and cream to a plain soda with sponge cake."—Detroit Tribune.

Squirrels.

Squirrels, which are often supposed to hibernate, retire to their nests only in very severe and prolonged frosts. A slight fall of snow merely amuses them, and they will come down from their trees and scamper over the powdery heaps with immense enjoyment. What they do not like is the snow on the leaves and branches, which falls in showers as they jump from tree to tree, and betray them to their enemies, the country boys. During a mild winter they even neglect to make a central store of nuts, and, instead of storing them in big hoards near the nest, just drop them into any convenient hole they know of near.

Is It Correct.

The Outlook quotes Mr. Howells as saying that such phrases as "seeing you in the window, I stopped to call," are not English. He maintains that what one should say is: "I saw you and stopped," and that the other form is one of the most common errors. Mr. Howells is a able writer, and an elegant scholar, and most people, when they stop to talk, prefer to do so through the means of ordinary colloquialisms, rather than standing up on learned stilts and spouting to a friend in the stiff and classic English of the Elizabethan era.

Where Is the Leak?

Benjamin Potter's landed estate, left more than half a century ago, that the rentals might be applied to the maintenance and education of poor white citizens of Kent county, Delaware, has at length yielded $700 for the purpose of the trust. During all these years of waiting no poor white citizen received aught from the estate, although it is estimated to be worth $100,000.

FLAGS OF THE AMERICAN NAVY.

Over 150 Different Pieces of Bunting Necessary on Board a Flagship.

The flags of the United States navy are made of American bunting, thoroughly tested for strength and soaked in salt water and dried in the sun for colors. There may, according to the Outlook, be some hundred and sixty flags on a United States war ship—say twenty-five foreign flags (according to the station on which she will cruise), twenty American ensigns, eleven pennants, four union jacks, twelve rear admiral's flags (if a flagship), twenty international signals, and the remainder signal and miscellaneous flags. Ensigns, stars and stripes, of course, run in eight sizes, from that used on vessels with very long spars, such as the new Brooklyn and Minneapolis will have, and which is nineteen feet on the hoist and thirty-three feet on the fly, to the little 2.37 by 4.50 foot boat flag, too small to sport more than the original thirteen states in its union. The No. 1 union jack is the 10.20 by 14.40 foot union of the No. 1 ensign, and the other jacks conform similarly to the unions of the corresponding ensigns. When a captain puts his ship into commission he hoists, in addition to the ensign, a pennant. This has a fly of seventy feet, the union occupying 17.50, with thirteen stars. The admiral's and vice admiral's flags of the United States navy, when these ranks are filled, are blue, with four and three white stars respectively. It will be remembered from the Columbian naval review, when our fleet was divided into three squadrons, each in command of a rear admiral, that we preserve the old English distinction of the blue, the red and the white flag. The secretary of the navy flies a blue flag with four white stars, an anchor and cable, the assistant secretary reversing the colors. The president's flag is blue, with the arms of the United States, the eagle and the stars white, the shield preserving the "tinctures." The red and white-crossed flag of Denmark is the oldest existing national color, having been in use since 1219.

The French Ballet Girl.

In France the ballet girl begins her career usually at 7 years old. She is then paid at the rate of forty cents for each appearance in public, as demoiselle de quadrille $20 to $40 a month, as a coryphée $50 to $60, and as a dancer $120. A dancer of the first class will get from $120 to $300 a month, and a star from $5,000 to $10,000 a year.

The Young Moon.

In a recent story two friends are described as sitting out one summer evening looking over the Thames, and the writer goes on to say: "By this time the young moon had arisen, and its cold light shimmered over the misty river." Such writers are reminded that the young moon goes to bed early, and can never be seen in the process of rising.

Pamphlets' Monument.

Pamphlets are said to owe their name to Pamphela, a Greek woman, who left behind her a number of scrap books containing notes, receipts, anecdotes and memoranda.

Alexandrites.

A popular but rare stone of recent discovery is the Alexandrite, which owes its name to quite a peculiar series of coincidences. On the day of the coming of age of the emperor of Alexander, of Russia, the discovery of a new variety of mineral was made in the emerald mines of the Catherine mountains. This stone varied in color from emerald to the darkest green, having often a roddish tint. Its especial peculiarity is that when exposed to artificial light its color changes entirely to a beautiful red. As green and red are the national colors of Russia, and in commemorative honor of the day on which the stone was discovered, the name Alexandrite was given to the mineral, and the custom inaugurated of submitting all the finer specimens to the emperor for his selection before dealers are allowed to purchase. In this way the Russian crown expects to secure the finest collection of Alexandrites of the world.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Qualified His Thanks.

In the first year of his practice, Judge Royce, of Vermont, was called to prosecute in a justice suit, and, fresh from Chitty, filed a plea in abatement, which he duly discussed. The justice, in deciding the case, said: "The young lawyer has filed what he calls a plea in abatement; now the plaintiff seems to be a very ignorant man, and his lawyer about as ignorant as he is, and his writ doesn't seem to be a very good writ, and it doesn't resemble one much more than it does a hog-yoke; but the plaintiff seems to be an honest man, and if he has a just claim against this defendant, he shall have judgment." Whereupon Judge Royce, elated at the result, but somewhat disgusted with the remarks of the justice, arose, and, making a very profound bow, said to the court: "I thank you, d—n you."—Argonaut.

A Disputed Case.

Many persons dispute the question as to whether or not badness caused either by disease or neglect can be cured. In deciding the question allow us to say that most cases can be cured, while others cannot. Only a specialist of years of experience can tell this. Call on Officers to Resign.

CLINTON, Ind., June 13.—The miners here are in an angry mood with the terms of the settlement, and especially with District President Dunkerly and National President McBride. At a mass meeting yesterday it was resolved not to accept the terms and another resolution was passed calling upon all officers concerned in the settlement to resign. The miners of Clinton and Lyford will not go to work and the prospect of a settlement here is gloomier than ever.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nerveine she now weighs 100 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone. She attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nerveine has brought her."

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

That Shaw

Will become the property of some popular young lady within the next four weeks.

We do not dare to predict who will get it, but a "dark horse" is talked of and the ballots will come in with a rush within the next three weeks, therefore those interested want to redouble their energies so that their particular favorite will not be behind in this popular contest.

A Word About the Shaw Piano

The first pianos made by the company were placed on the market less than five years ago. Instantly the trade recognized their merits and put in bids for territory until at this time these instruments can be seen almost everywhere.

To be able to build such a good business in so short a time there must be great policy behind the house.

The policy of the Shaw Piano Company, is first to build a good instrument, second, to advertise it largely and artistically.

The first part of the policy, to build a good instrument, is amply testified to by the favor they have met with both from dealer and artist.

The Shaw Piano is strictly a high grade first-class instrument, one that the purchasing public can have every confidence in. Messrs. S. C. Burnham & Co., of our city have for years been representing other first-class pianos but have been won by the construction, tone and quality of this new aspirant for honors so that today they are bending all their energies in favor of the Matchless Shaw, as it is termed. With no remorse of conscience they claim it is the finest musical instrument in the piano line they have ever represented.

Judging from the above account of this wonderful piano it is any wonder that the contest now going on is attracting universal attention. Rally round your favorite lady, boys. See that she becomes the happy possessor of a SHAW.

Catarrh AND COLD IN THE HEAD

relieved instantly by one application of Birney's Catarrh Powder

REV. PATRICK CLARK, Sec'y to the Rt. Rev. Bishop of Columbus, Ohio, writes:

GENTLEMEN:—I cannot say enough for your Powder. It has cured me of an aggravated attack of catarrh when nothing else could help me. Am delighted with it. All my friends to whom I administered samples are quite enthusiastic over it. The most sincere speak most encouragingly of their use in the hospital under their care. I will do anything to speak a good word for the remedy to help others who are suffering.

M. E. PRITCHARD, Custodian U. S. Appraiser's Stores, Chicago, writes:

GENTLEMEN:—Being almost entirely deaf for a number of years, past and getting no relief from many so-called cures which I tried, was induced by a friend to try Dr. Birney's Catarrh Powder for my deafness. Have recovered my hearing entirely, so that I can now hear distinctly. It being held in esteem from my ear. I look upon it as a positive cure for deafness and have recommended its use to many of my friends and can say I have never heard of a case where it has failed to relieve.

THE ARTIST'S QUEEN.

An artist once gave to the canvas a face
That the wise came miles to see.
A lovelight glance in eyes all a-dance
He had caught in its subtlety.

He had given a crown to the regal one
And knights at her command,
But the girl-like mien was not of a queen,
Though courtiers kissed her hand.

And the critics said, as they gazed enrapt,
That the rank of a queen was not there,
Though there never was such grace and such touch
Or a face more delicate, fair.

And they hid to the artist and found that he
Was in quarters poor and bare,
But he held in his heart the counterpart
Of a rustic maiden there.

—Detroit Free Press.

THE LESSON OF LOVE.

"Yann!"
"Excellency."
"Here."

With bowed head and drawing one foot after the other slowly along the ground as if to show great humility, the favorite huntsman of Prince Horostienko entered the arbor where his illustrious master was wont to repose after eating.

"Approach, son of a dog, and listen." Yann Barsouck came nearer and bent forward until his face touched his master's boot.

"Are you always sure of your hand and your sight?"

"God help me, yes, excellency."

"Well, you are to wander away from the castle, as is your habit. You must pretend to have lost your way. At night fall enter the garden secretly, and jumping the hedge conceal yourself in yonder clump of bushes, which is directly in front of the window of the blue salon."

"Yes, excellency."

"The salon is sure to be lighted. There you will see the princess and Count Alexis Karagine. Watch well. When you see me enter the room, raise your gun and aim at the count."

Drawn up in his rustic chair, his face more wrinkled and distorted than ever before, the old prince spoke authoritatively. His gaze was intently fixed upon his huntsman, in whose features no other sentiment was discernible save that of servile obedience. He continued:

"Aim at the count, but do not shoot at once. Before you blow out his brains I wish to make him understand that he is to die."

"Yes, excellency."

"Therefore, you will stand, your finger on the trigger, until I let fall a handkerchief which I shall carry in my hand. Then, Yann, shoot and hit your mark. You understand?"

"Yes, excellency."

"Go."

Yann was more than a man—he was a brute. Whence he came no one knew. From Lithuania perhaps, judging from his name—the only words he could speak when they found him, a tiny babe, under a bush on the highroad that crossed Prince Horostienko's estates. They left him to grow up in the courtyard among the servants and grooms. For his daily nourishment he depended upon the charity of the peasants and the scullions.

At 16 he had made a bow, with which he could bring down all the apples and pears he wanted. Never once did he miss his aim.

One day the prince saw Yann's arrow pierce the blossom of a bergamot tree, and he commanded him to be brought before him. The servant who led Yann to his excellency trembled. But his excellency was in good humor. He contented himself with giving the culprit 15 lashes, after which he was sent to the head huntsman, with orders that he was to have a uniform and a gun.

Yann retained an agreeable remembrance of his master's clemency. He wished to show that he was grateful. Besides shooting was his ruling passion.

His skill surpassed that of all the most renowned marksmen of his time. At 40 paces he could send a bullet directly through the eye of an otter without the slightest injury to the fur. Then he would silently deposit the dead beast at his master's feet. Being repaid with a simple "Well done," Yann would return to his thatched hut, surly and taciturn, without even a glance at the group of maidens, who, with petticoats daintily tucked up, washed their linen in the river.

He never spoke to any one. The peasants held him in awe. Evil stories were current about him. They may have been true. For Yann there was but one law—the word of his master; but one love—that for his gun.

When the evening tea had been drunk, the prince, making a pretext of having some orders to give, took leave of the count, his only guest that day, and having kissed his wife's hand withdrew to his own apartment.

A half hour later he went down into the garden.

There everything spoke of love. Oppressed by the heat of the day, the plants and flowers had blossomed once more into life, filling the air with their heavy fragrance. The fireflies floated like bright emeralds on the night breeze to where their mates awaited them under the thick leaves. In the grass the crickets sang softly to their love mates of an hour.

The prince took a circuitous route and returned on the grass, so that his footsteps might not be heard. Drawing aside the heavy leaves of an elder tree: "Are you there? Very well. Remember the signal, and fire at once! In the count's eye, Yann—like the otter's."

"Yes, excellency."

Certainly the poor princess had struggled conscientiously to resist the ardent supplications of Alexis Petrovitch. But he was 25, and she was only 20.

The grave carresses of her husband suggested to the princess what the infinite joys of young love might be, with its divine intoxication, its ardent embraces. Never yet had she given her lips unasked to her husband. Must she always submit to his almost paternal kisses? And what promises she read in the eyes of Alexis!

The princess did not stop to analyze either her preferences or her aversions. She loved Alexis; that was enough. Love at 20 has a spark of divinity in it. It does not even care to understand itself.

One day Alexis swore to the princess that he would only put his lips to the hem of her gown, but carried on by the torrent of his youthful love he kissed her passionately. She fled to her favorite blue salon, which she never allowed any one to enter. There she permitted the count to join her.

After that they sat there whenever they were alone together.

So it was that, seated on a divan opposite the long window, the princess saw kneeling before her him who was not yet her lover, but to whom she felt already that she entirely belonged.

"Ah, my life, how I love you!" he was saying.

His arms were about her. Drawing her closer to him, he sought her lips. She was uneasy and made as if she would release herself, when, suddenly conquered by the convulsion which rent her heart, she closed her eyes, and her lips met his.

Yann Barsouck watched. Before those two young creatures rapt in an ecstasy of love he smiled.

This love, what was it? A pit into which man led woman, and she ran to it blindly, careless of her fate.

Yann understood this love. No one could imitate as he could the moaning love lamentations of the otter to his mate. How many had he shot, to save them from their "doom," as he expressed it.

Meanwhile, his eyes fixed on the count, Yann silently leveled his carbine.

Inflamed by the long, voluptuous embrace and moved by the strength of his passion, Alexis arose. Little by little he pressed closer against him the slight form lying so unresistingly in his arms. With his impatient fingers he tore aside the silk folds of her gown.

But the princess stood erect. The adorable modesty of her gesture, the look of amazement in her eyes, accompanied by so much love, so much fear, reminded Alexis of his promise. Falling once more upon his knees, respectfully, reverently, he laid his lips to the hem of her gown.

Barsouck saw all, even the look of mad passion with which the princess thanked Alexis, unconsciously promising to repay him a hundredfold for the sacrifice she now imposed on him.

A veil was suddenly torn away from the soul of the brute. His savage nature was electrified by the ray of understanding which penetrated his very heart. It was a new idea—exquisite, elevating—that of woman's modesty.

Now he understood pure love.

As Alexis rose from his knees the prince entered. Certain of satiating his hatred, gloating over the horror into which his unexpected entrance had thrown them, the prince advanced deliberately toward the lovers, who stood trembling before him. He went cautiously, like a caterpillar creeping under the petals of a flower.

Alexis threw himself in front of the princess. But quickly disengaging herself the woman boldly confessed all. Then, with a superb audacity, she stood staring in her husband's face.

Old Horostienko was beside himself with rage. Grasping the handkerchief which was to serve as signal to Barsouck, he threw it with the force of a blow in his wife's face.

Surprised to see the count still erect, he turned toward the window—and fell, shot through the eye.

Like the otter!—Translated For San Francisco Argonaut From the Russian.

An African King's Family.

The following is an extract from a letter written by a French lady in Senegal and published in a Paris newspaper, referring to a visit to King Behanzin of Dahomey, on board the Second: "The king, followed by five wives and four children, of whom one is a handsome boy, then came forward in a silk mantle striped with black and blue and elegantly draped. His head was bare, and he had on his feet sandals held on by crossed bands embroidered in wools of many colors. He smoked a large ebony pipe, the bowl and shank of which were circled with silver. His French is limited to bon jour and ami, and I am the first white woman he ever saw, and the sight of me astonished him. He at first gazed at me, then roared with laughter, and when he had roared till he was tired looked around and asked where my husband was. The interpreter having pointed him out, he took him by the shoulder and gave him a friendly shake, which was as much as to say, 'What a lucky fellow you are!' One of the five wives cooks. She has lost all her teeth. The others stand around the deposed king. The children are very nice. Behanzin is elderly, about 55, and has a white head of hair. He hardly knows how to walk, because on account of his rank he has always been carried."

The Queen Yields.

Even the queen felt herself obliged to yield to the storm of protests aroused by limiting the attendance at the annual drawing rooms. Instead, however, of admitting the usual crush at each occasion, she decided to give a special reception in the latter part of May, to which 200 who were unable to obtain places on the first lists will be admitted. Several American debutantes will profit by the arrangement.—London Letter.

HIS LOST RING.

Magician Herrmann Recovers It in a Strange Manner.

It is not generally known that Herrmann, the magician, is a mesmerist as well, and that he has made hypnotism a life study. It has often stood him in good stead, too. During his last engagement in Brazil, several years ago, he was presented by Dom Pedro with a magnificent solitaire diamond ring. While doing his famous gold fish trick one night in the midst of the audience this ring slipped from his wet finger and rolled out of sight under the seats. A thorough search was instituted and large rewards offered for the missing gem, but without avail. Finally the thought struck Herrmann that he would try his mesmeric powers, put a subject to sleep and try to locate the lost jewel in that manner. Accordingly he advertised for a clairvoyant and found one in the person of a beautiful Spanish lady. With a few passes of his hands he put her to sleep and then proceeded to question her in Spanish. The lady put her hand to her forehead in a bewildered manner and after a short pause said:

"The diamond was stolen by a man who had charge of horses."

That was absolutely all the information Herrmann could get from her, but the clue was sufficient. He thought of a brigandish looking Spaniard from whom he had often hired horses, and whom he recollected was in the auditorium the night he lost the ring. He went straight to the stable, and, looking the man straight in the eye, said:

"You stole my ring. Produce it!"

The fellow turned as white as a sheet, but protested his innocence. The next day, while at breakfast, Herrmann was handed a package which he found contained the missing ring. He does not pretend to explain how the clairvoyant knew of its whereabouts or who had it, but it was a wonderful case of mind-reading.

SOME WELL KNOWN FACES

He Causes Deserts to Bloom.

One of the prominent irrigationists of the west is Dr. E. W. Hilgard, professor in charge of the agricultural college of the University of California. One of the professor's recent experiments was the reclamation of some "black alkali" soil in Tulare county, Cal. Owing to an excess of carbonate of soda "black alkali" land has always been considered worthless. Professor Hilgard directed that a simple dressing of land plaster be applied, which converted the noxious soda into harmless Glauber's salt, and fields of golden grain are bowing in the breezes on land that in its native condition was the veritable abomination of desolation. So great has been the success of the scheme of irrigation that there are now about 21,000,000 acres "under ditch" in the arid regions, and it is said that within the past five years over $200,000,000 has actually been invested in irrigation enterprises.

FEARED AN OUTBREAK.

Starving Workmen Parade Toledo and Demand Assistance.

TOLEDO, June 14.—A procession of 500 or 600 unemployed Polish workmen marched down LaGrange street yesterday. Before the procession had reached Cherry street the police authorities had been notified and the riot alarm was turned in. All the available police were at once sent to the corner of Superior and Adams streets, which was regarded at the objective point of the marchers.

A delegation was appointed by the men to call on the mayor and inquire of him if the $100,000 of park bonds could not be sold and the money used to give the men work. Mayor Major explained to the committee that he was as powerless as any other individual to help them in the matter of furnishing work. The men are without work and their families are starving.

Express Train Robbed in Missouri.
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 14.—It is rumored that an express train was held up and robbed at Neelyville, Mo., near Poplar Bluff, about midnight.
